GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

SHIPWRECK OF THE PENNSYLVANIA.

AUGUSTA, (GEO.) Nov. 1.

The following account of this dreadful disaster, a notice of which we published a short time since, was politely handed us by a gentleman now in this city, as contained in a letter addressed to him by one of the survivors of the wreck.—The Pennsylvanian had on board a Thespian company bound for Texas.—Press.

NEW ORLEANS, OCT. 14.

DEAR SIR: Well, here I am in New Orleans, rather unexpectedly; as you know, when we started we landed for Texas. No doubt you would like to be informed how I came here. Well, listen, or rather read. We sat sail on the 10th of September, in the schooner Pennsylvania, Captain Williams, the mate, four hands, and twenty one passengers. We met with very fair weather till the 14th. About three o'clock in the afternoon it commenced blowing a tremendous gale from the southwest. We commenced reefing the main and fore sails; the gale continuing to increase in violence, the captain thought it proper to lay to. Accordingly he did so about six o'clock, by taking down the main sail, and close reefing the fore sail. About this time I was standing on deck with some others, the sea rolling mountains high, when suddenly a sea struck her in the bows, and swept her from stem to stern, thereby wetting us to the skin.—I immediately went down to change my clothes. After putting on a shirt, Wilson (the survivor with myself) says to me, "lay down till the storm is over." I accordingly did so. I had lain about an hour or two when Burrill, a passenger, cries out, "we're sprung a leak." I told him to hold his tongue and not be so foolish, as it was only the water coming through the hatch, (for you must know that the mate had put the hatch on and fastened us down.) He persisted in declaring that it was so, when another gentleman, whose name was also Wilson, went over to see, and to our horror came back and told us that the water was coming in at a place about six or eight inches long. There was now eight inches water in her hold. The pumps on deck were kept going all the time. We lay in this situation until half past 11 o'clock, when over she went, keel upwards. This took place 400 miles off Cape Hatteras. Our situation was now horrible in the extreme; the vessel heaving with us between the plank, jamming and bruising us in the most horrid manner. I forgot to say that the captain, mate, and four hands, McGill, Miller, and lady, Mrs. Gilson, Barry, Lyons, and Whitney, perished immediately. We lay in this dreadful situation until the next day, when the sea became more calm. We then discovered that Gilson, Wells, Kerr, Thompson, and Mrs. Barry, had escaped from the cabin, the bulk head having been knocked away. We got them to the centre of the vessel, where we had more room.—Towards night the sea become more rough, when we were again dashed about between the barrels and plank. To conceive our situation would be impossible; suffice it to say we continued in this situation until morning. With the morning the sea became more calm, when we began to look for food. Judge of our surprise and horror when we discovered that every article of food had gone through the main hatch. (We were loaded with lumber, onions, flour, potatoes, and hops.) Our situation was now indeed desperate. No water, no food, and 400 miles from land. On learning our situation, one of the Dutchman dived through the hatch to save himself, and was seen no more. There were now thirteen left. Gilson, two Wilsons, Thompson, Wells, Kerr, a boy, (name unknown,) myself, three Dutchmen, Mrs. Barry, and Mrs. Burrill. From the 15th to the 18th the sea was very calm. On the morning of the 18th, Burrill, in looking for something to quench our parching thirst, discovered over the cabin a demijohn of gin. We immediately went to work taking away the plank to get at it; we had removed all but two, when, in their eagerness to get it, it broke. Hope had indeed almost left us, when, in taking away the plank, we discovered the sky-light in the cabin deck to be out. I immediately went down and picked up swords, guns, pistols, &c. from off the cabin deck. I now tried to get out, but found it almost impossible, on account of the suction of the vessel in the heaving. Kerr and Wilson then tried, but with no better success. On looking down, again I saw a pistol on the deck; I went down to get it, and while down, by a sudden effort, made out to get through. I swam to the stern of the vessel caught hold of the rudder eyes, (the rudder being out,) and got upon the keel.—I had no sooner got up, when I saw Wilson. I immediately got him on the keel with me. To be brief, we remained on the keel from the 18th to the 22d, when we were discovered, (it being a dead calm) by the captain of the ship Amelia, bound for New Orleans. He immediately sent a boat and took us off; they then cut three large holes in the bottom, and found that they were all dead, except one Dutchman, whom they took aboard; he lived two days and then died. While on the ship we were shown every kindness by Captain Thompson and mate, Mr. Plummer, and passengers.

The Arkansas Gazette states that the steamboat Belleview struck a snag recently, near Frog Bayou, and sunk immediately. No lives lost

HENNEPIN JOURNAL.

FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 7, 1837.

PUBLICATION DAY.

For a considerable time past we have had in contemplation a change in our publication day, as Thursday has been found less suited to our purposes than Saturday. Henceforth, therefore, the Journal will be published on Saturday.

OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Several communications are upon our file, for insertion. They will appear in our next—the pre-occupation of our columns excluding them from the present number.

THE RIVER.

The Illinois river is, at present, nineteen feet above low water mark, and falling slowly. The Motto, during her last trip, proceeded up Fox river several miles. Steamboats, as usual, are very busy, and trade brisk. The weather is fine and there is but little prospect of the river closing for some weeks to come.

THE MAILS.

The mails are very irregular at present, owing, we presume, to high waters. An arrival this evening confirms the intelligence of the success of the Whigs at the recent election in New York. The Whigs are said to have a majority of seventy in the House of Representatives, and the Democrats a majority of twenty in the Senate.

STATUE OF WASHINGTON—LIBERAL GIFT.—On the 26th ult. an elegant statue of Washington, presented by John Hagan, Esq. of New Orleans, to the Exchange and Banking Company of that city, was elevated to its lofty seat at the back of the portico of the Exchange Hotel, by Mr. Gallier, the architect of the building, in a safe and most expeditious manner.

The True American states that this statue of the "Father of his country" is the work of Carlo Richi, of Carrara, of the marble of which place it is made. It represents him seated, in Roman armor and the toga, supporting in his left hand an entablature, on which is proposed to be inscribed his farewell address, whilst his right hand is gracefully raised; his sword lies at his feet. On either side of the pedestal are wreaths of oak and laurel, and in the front the arms of Louisiana. The likeness is said to be admirable. This gift of Mr. Hagan cost fourteen thousand dollars.

A NEW COACH.—There is now in the course of building, at a coachmaker's in the metropolis, a coach of a description at once novel, elegant, and safe. It is the invention of a scientific gentleman named Stafford, who has secured a patent for the same. Before we give a description of the vehicle, it may be proper to state that, on the suggestion of the superintendent of the royal mails, a similar coach, intended for the country, was built, in order that its mechanical construction might be fully and practically tried and tested.—Accordingly a public trial of one built at Nottingham was made, in presence of several hundreds of the most respectable inhabitants of that town. Frisby an experienced and well-known whip took the reins; the coach was drawn by four spirited horses, and had, inside and out, the full complement of passengers. In descending the hill to New Radford it was several times intentionally, when running at the top of speed, suddenly swerved off the road, the near wheels working upon a bank three feet high, and the off wheels in the drain. In each emergency the coach retained its vertical position like a mariner's compass, so much so that the gentlemen who composed the inside passengers were altogether insensible to their (to others) apparently perilous situation. The body of the new coach, instead of resting, as is the case, upon springs below, is poised upon two upright supporters rising from the beds and axles, and passing up between the body and the hoots. The tops of these supporters are surmounted by elliptic springs, on which it is suspended, so that meeting inequalities on the road, the centre of gravity of the vehicle is freely adjusted, and the liability to overturn it completely conquered.—London Morn. Chron.

NATCHEZ, SEPT. 30.

UNPARALLELED MURDER.—On the night of the 25th instant the most unprecedented murder in the record of crimes was committed in Simpson county, Mississippi. Samuel Brown, of the age of 98 years, and his wife, a very old lady, were both murdered in their house, together with three negroes. Mr. Brown was a prudent, saving old man, and had the reputation in his neighborhood of having on hand a large sum of silver; and on that night some fiend, in human shape, approached the house, and from the appearance, with a light wood knot and hatchet, broke the skulls of both the old persons, in a most frightful and lacerated manner; and, with the same brutal barbarity, killed the three negroes, and threw two men on the fire, and left the negro woman weltering in gore on her bed. All Mr. Brown's silver, as his neighbors say, to the amount of $8,000, was taken out of his chest, $350 paper money in the same chest was left.

One negro woman on the place, not murdered, says, at a late hour in the night she was waked from her sleep by a noise; that she ran out and beheld her master and mistress lying on the porch murdered; and some one with a torch in his hand forcing a negro man into the house, as was thought, to show the money: the same man was afterwards murdered and thrown on the fire.—The woman, afraid to stir, gave no alarm until morning, when the neighbors assembled to behold this awful sight. No evidence has yet been discovered that would give the slightest clue of the murderer. But the public eye is turning to a certain individual well known in that neighborhood. The hand of justice will overtake him.

From the Cincinnati Whig.

HATCHING CHICKENS BY STEAM.—The New York Transcript mentions, as a new discovery, that a Mr. William Fukes, of that city, had commenced hatching chickens by steam, in an oven, after the Chinese or Turkish plan. There has been an extensive establishment of this character, for some time in this neighborhood of Cincinnati; so that Mr. Fukes is not the first introducer of this mode of furnishing poultry for market.

PROVERBS.—He who marrieth for wealth sells his liberty.

He has a great fancy to marry that goes to the d—l for a wife.

He who does not honor his wife dishonors himself.

He that woos a maid must come seldom in her sight; he that woos a widow must woo her day and night.

Honest men marry soon, [doubtful,] wise men not at all.—Printer's D—l.

If marriages be made in heaven some have few friends there.

It's a good horse that never stumbles, and a good wife that never grumbles.

It's a sad house where the hen crows louder than the cock.

If thou desirest a wife, chuse her on Saturday rather than on Sunday. [That is, in her dishabille.]

PRINTER'S PROVERB.—Never print a Tax List for six cents per tract.

GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

From the N. Y. Journal of Commerce.

DECISION IN THE MANNER OF SOLOMON.—Sometime in the month of June last, a Milesian named Bryan McDermott, who for aught we know may be a lineal decendent of one of Ossian's heroes, had the misfortune to lose his wife, who died in this city, leaving poor Bryan so poor that he was obliged to send the two male heirs of his house to the Almshouse, from whence they were sent to the farm on Long Island. About the same period, another Milesian of the same name, but different family, namley Mrs. Mary M'Dermott, who so far forgot what was due to her high lineage and noble birth, that she fell desperately in love of gin and bitters, and was sent to get rid of her attachment, to the Penitentiary. Mary was a married woman, and like most of the Mrs. M'Dermotts, had provided an heir to her estate, and when the mother went to enjoy the air of Blackwell's Island, the young gentleman was sent to finish his education with the other young M'Dermotts at the Country College of the Almshouse. Here the three little M'Dermotts were so well fed and taken care of, that as it turned out, in a very short space of time, their very nearest relatives could not know them.

As soon as Mrs. McDermott had re-established her health at her country residence, she was liberated, and immediately commenced a suit against her husband for separate maintenance, and the latter paid $100 to the Almshouse in trust for his wife and heir. Possessed of so much money, Mrs. McDermott thought it beneath her dignity to have her son at the Almshouse, and applied to have him restored to her, and received an order to have him given up. On receiving the order, Mrs. McDermott "flew on the wings of maternal love," and without stopping to take a drop of gin on her journey, arrived at the Farm and demanded the restitution of her little darling. There happened, however, to be some dozen of little McDermotts there at the same time, and the "marks and tokens," which she gave of the one she wanted, answered so completely for some four or five others, that they were all paraded before her, and she could not tell which of them was her owe. One thing, however, she was certain of, that of all the McDermotts from Cork to Connaught, none of them was half so pretty as her own Jimmy, and accordingly after thoroughly examining them all, she laid claim to the finest child among them, and took him home with her, and to crown her happiness, her husband went back to live with her.

In the mean time, Mr. Brian McDermott, who had also left his two sons in the Alms house, experienced a great change of circumstances by getting another wife and fortune, in consequence of which, he also determined to bring home his children, and applied for them at the Alms house, and got an order to have them delivered to him.—Only one of them, however, was forthcoming, and Mr. McDermott sternly demanded what become of the other. Colonel Mann opened his register and found, that out of all the McDermotts who were in the Alms house during the period in question, none of them died, ran away, or left it, except the boy taken by Mrs. McDermott. She was therefore desired to bring the boy to the Alms house, to ascertain if she had made any mistake in the matter, and the moment Mr. Brian McDermott saw him, he vowed most vehemently that the fine little fellow was his own, and so like him that he could swear it.—Mrs. McDermott, in very lady like terms, gave him the lie direct, and told him the boy was her own boy, and the very picture of his father; and that Mr. Brian McDermott had a great deal of impudence to insinuate that he had any claim whatever to its paternity. After a few more complimentary remarks, the lady and gentleman became quite outrageous, and both seized hold of the poor child and endeavored to pull it from each other in so violent a manner that young McDermott ran no little risk of being torn to pieces between them. One of the commissioners, however, interfered, and saved the child from destruction.

After having duly considered the matter, he determined to test the paternity of the child, somewhat in the way that Solomon did in the days of yore; and let nature decide the issue.—The child was accordingly placed amongst several others of its own age, and the other son of Bryan McDermott was then brought into the room, and asked did he know any of the children. This little one, who was about 5 years old, ran and caught hold of the child in dispute, kissed it, and called it brother; which decided the case against Mrs. McD. and she was told that she must go back to the Farm and try if she could not find another McDermott more likely to be her offspring. Never was a woman so enraged as was Mrs. McDermott, who still persisted that this was her son, and threatened to sue the Commissioners for taking him from her. But after a few minutes she candidly confessed that her husband always entertained doubts of the child's identity, and remarked that he had a nose more like the McDermotts from Connaught than the McDermotts of Cork.

From the Quincy Argus, Nov. 11.

MELANCHOLY.—As Mr. GEO. W. BROWN of this place was attempting to cross Bear Creek on Monday last, in a dearborn wagon, having his wife and child with him, he lost his child, and with difficulty saved himself and wife. The moment they entered the ford, the creek being very much swollen by the late rains, and in fact impassible, the force of the current upset the wagon, and they were all precipitated into the stream. Mr. Brown used every exertion to save his wife and child, that it was possible for a man in his situation to make, but he only succeeded in saving the former. His wife floated some distance with the current, and fortunately made out to catch hold of the limb of a tree which projected over the water, and sustained herself until Mr. Brown went to her assistance. The child, a boy between two and three years of age, was found the next day about a half a mile below the ford, where the current had left him. The horse was found the next day under some drift wood, with one leg out of the water.

We would think that the danger of this stream in high water, and the many, and often serious accidents which happen in attempting to cross it, should induce our County Commissioners to use some efforts to have a good and substantial bridge across it. If the creation of a bridge should be the means of saving one life, it would amply compensate them for the trouble and expense, and we sincerely hope that they will take this matter in hand immediately.

From the Gallipolis Journal, Nov 9.

ACCIDENT.—On Friday morning last, a Mr. Ripley, and a young man by the name of Roadarmour, of the vicinity of Patriot, in this county, went out together hunting turkies. By some means they became seperated, and Ripley seeing Roadarmour about one hundred and fifty yards distant, through the bushes, setting on a log supposed he was a turkey and fired at him. The ball hit the trigger of Roadarmour's gun, which was standing by him, and entered the abdomen just at the point of the hip bone, and lodged under the skin on the opposite side. The ball has since been extracted, and for several days hopes were entertained of his recovery, but on Monday night last he died. We understand that no blame is attatched to Ripley.

THE VINE.—A gentleman of Cincinnati, Nicholas Longworth, Esq., who has had great experience in the cultivation of the vine, in a letter published in the Cincinnati Express, respecting the vintage of the present year, says:

"The day is not distant, when the banks of the Ohio will rival the rivers of France and Germany in the quantity and quality of their wines.—But after an experience of twenty-five years, and a waste of time and money in cultivation of a great variety of foreign wine grapes, recommend to all persons establishing vineyards to discard foreign grapes, and confine themselves to American varieties, and the producing of new varieties from their seed."

From the Baltimore Patriot.

MAMMOTH PEARS.—The Pittsburg Gazette notices a Pear from the farm of Morgan Robertson, Esq. of that city, which weighed thirty-two ounces, and measured over fifteen inches in circumference. This is almost equal to those which grew in the Duke of Argyle's garden.

GENERAL LAND AGENCY.

THE subscribers, having formed a connexion under the firm of JUDSON & KINNEY, for the purpose of transacting a General Land Agency Business, at Peru, beg leave to offer their services to the public as General Land Agents for the purchase, sale, entry and conveyance of lands in the Galena Land District, and throughout the State of Illinois. The termination of the Illinois and Michigan canal having been located at this place, makes it an important point for the establishment of a Land Agency Office, as all the lands within several miles around have been entered, and are now in the hands of respective individuals. They will be prepared to furnish correct intelligence in relation to the value, location and titles of all the most desirable tracts within the District. They will also be furnished with the Plats of the several townships, and be able to render every facility to those who wish to make purchases.—One of the firm (Mr. Judson) has been engaged in the Land Office at Galena, since its first opening, and from his experience in the business and knowledge of the District generally, is perhaps better calculated than any other individual to tender every means of information, and best serve those who may entrust their business with us. Any business appertaining to a General Land Agency, committed to them, will be attended to with promptness, and to the best interest of those favoring them with their employ.

All letters on business (postage paid) addressed to them at Peru, La Salle county, Illinois, will receive the earliest attention. JUDSON & KINNEY

PROSPECTUS OF THE
HENNEPIN JOURNAL.

IN addressing those among whom he has not yet acquired a residence, and to whom he is almost unknown, the subscriber feels himself laboring under considerable embarrassment—but when he reflects that the patronage about to be solicited is expected to benefit not himself only, but those also who bestow it, and be the means of assisting in the great work of dispensing light and knowledge to American citizens, he feels emboldened to lay before the public his proposition, trusting that every one of the people of this vicinity will award to it his hearty concurrence, and extend to its author the right hand of fellowship.

As to political opinions, the undersigned must frankly declare that he not only now is, but ever has been, numbered amongst those who have opposed the elevation and most of the measures of the dominant party, but he takes this occasion to say that his own course has been the very reverse of violent, he having ever, so far as lay in his power, endeavored to soothe down the angry elements of party crimination and recrimination, and attempted to impress upon all that the prosperity of our common country and the maintenance of good order and social intercourse was far preferable to mere party aggrandizement. As a new Administration has recently commenced its career, it is to be hoped that its actions may be such as to unite every citizen in their support; and, for one, the subscriber declares that he will throw aside prejudice, and approve of every measure advocated by it which may carry upon its face an intention to benefit the country, while he will as certainly unsparingly condemn any and every one which his judgment may lead him to think has an opposite bearing. The undersigned is fully aware that in this our day an independent press is not only unpopular, but likewise very rarely to be met with—yet he cannot but think that such a state of affairs is not approved of by the great majority of the enlightened and reflecting citizens of our free and happy country. An independent press, however, must be supported, nay, liberally patronized, if it be desired—and such an one it is the intention of the subscriber to locate at the point designated above, which if it shall please the public to sustain, the thanks of its conductor shall be shown by every exertion on his part to advance the true interests of the section in which it is located, and the country generally. Further remarks are considered, at this time, superfluous. W. EVERETT.

THE WESTERN MONTHLY MAGAZINE AND LITERARY JOURNAL.

CONDUCTED BY W. D. GALLAGHER & J. B. MARSHALL.

THE Editor of the "Western Literary Journal" having in connection with James B. Marshall, Esq. become proprietor of the "Western Monthly Magazine," the two works have been united, and will hereafter be published, simultaneously, at Cincinnati and Louisville. Every arrangement being now made for issuing the Magazine punctually, and in a style equal to its Eastern contemporaries, it is trusted that the union here announced will meet the approbation of the patrons generally of both publications. The readers of the 'Journal' will find increased attractions in the work, from the contributions of the correspondents of the 'Magazine;' and those of the 'Magazine' will not only find the same, from the writings of the correspondents of the 'Journal,' but will also get a larger amount of reading matter than they have hitherto received. Not in the spirit of boasting, but to give the patrons of the 'Magazine and Journal' an idea of what they may expect, from month to month, as the numbers appear, the following list of occasional correspondents and regular contributors, is given:—Morgan Neville, Edward D. Mansfield, James H. Perkins, Alexander Kinmont, Edward P. Cranch, John L. Riddell, Cha's R. Ramsay, R. Shelton Mackenzie, George D. Prentice, Ephraim Peabody, Thomas H. Shreve, Samuel Eells, John B. Dillon, Albert Pike, Lewis F. Thomas, Mrs. Caroline Lee Hentz, Dr. S. P. Hildreth and others, Wilkins Tannehill, J. A. M'Clung, Charles A. Jones, H. J. Groesbeck, William B. Oaks, J. N. M'Jilton, Otway Curry, Miss Harriet L. Beasley.

The 'Western Monthly Magazine and Literary Journal' is published during the first week of each month. Its general contents are: Tales; Essays; Poetry; Sketches of American Scenery, Character and Manners; Reviews, and Literary Notices, of New Works in the several departments of Literature and Science; Biographical Sketches, particularly of the Pioneers of the West; Narratives of Border Adventure; Statistical Papers; &c. &c. Each number of the Magazine contains from 72 to 80 octavo pages; and the year is divided into two volumes of about 450 pages. Terms: $3,00 per annum, payable at the time of subscribing—$3,50, if payment be delayed six months—$4,00, if delayed over that time. Number one, of the New Series of the work, has just been published.

MONTAGUE'S BALM AND INDIAN
REMEDY FOR THE TOOTH-ACHE.

THE established reputation and constantly increasing demand for this effectual remedy of pain and preservation of the teeth, has induced the subscriber to offer it to the American public. Arrangements have been made to supply agents in all the principal cities and towns in the United States, so as to place it within the reach of those suffering and likely to to suffer with this most harrassing of all aches, TOOTH-ACHE.

When applied according to directions given on the bottle it has never failed to afford immediate and permanent relief. The application and remedy are simple, innocent and not unpleasant, and the large number of persons in different sections of the country, that have already experienced such delightful and salutary effects from the use of the Balm, are ready to bear, (for the public good,) their testimony, to its unrivaled qualities.
